Indianapolis Mayor Joe Hogsett and the Indianapolis Public Education Corporation Announce Andrew Strobe as Executive Vice President

INDIANAPOLIS — Today, Indianapolis Mayor Joe Hogsett and recently announced Executive Director of the Indianapolis Public Education Corporation (IPEC), Dr. Karega Rausch, announce Indianapolis Public Schools (IPS) Deputy Superintendent Andrew Strobe will join the IPEC as Executive Vice President.

“I am thrilled to welcome Andrew Strobe to the Indianapolis Public Education Corporation. Together, he and Dr. Rausch will advance collaboration across our city’s public education landscape, delivering meaningful and lasting results for our students, families, and community,” said Indianapolis Mayor Joe Hogsett. “Andrew’s extensive leadership experience with Indianapolis Public Schools and his proven commitment to expanding access to quality education in Indianapolis make him an exceptional addition to this work.”

“I want to extend a warm welcome to Andrew Strobe as he joins the IPEC executive leadership team. Andrew brings deep experience in public education leadership, a strong understanding of Indianapolis schools, and a proven commitment to serving students and families. I look forward to working alongside him as we help bring our city together around a unified vision for public education,” said Dr. Karega Rausch, Executive Director, IPEC.

“Andrew has been a trusted thought partner and an integral part of my leadership team over the decade he has spent in Indianapolis Public Schools,” said IPS Superintendent Dr. Aleesia Johnson. Andrew operates with a deep integrity and passion for ensuring all students have the best conditions in place to be successful and I have no doubt that he will bring those same qualities to his work with the Indianapolis Public Education Corporation,” she added.

Andrew Strobe joins IPEC after nearly four years as Deputy Superintendent of Indianapolis Public Schools. Earlier, as Chief of Staff/Chief Strategy and Planning Officer, he helped lead the district's high school redesign, and the COVID-19 reopening and Rebuilding Stronger initiatives. He began his career in corporate finance at Ernst & Young and also taught middle school math in Chicago Public Schools. He is a recent graduate of the Broad Center’s Fellowship for Public Education Leadership at the Yale School of Management. He holds degrees from the Harvard Graduate School of Education and the University of Missouri.

Mr. Strobe’s starting date will be announced in the following days.

About the Indianapolis Public Education Corporation

The Indianapolis Public Education Corporation (IPEC) is a municipal corporation led by a mayor-appointed board established in 2026 to establish a unified student transportation, school property, and school performance system within IPS boundaries to maximize the efficient use of taxpayer resources, respecting decisions of individual public schools, and creating the best conditions for student learning and success that serves every student and family in Indianapolis, regardless of the public school they attend.
